Sunday is London's international contemporary art fair for young galleries. Held annually it focuses on new and emerging galleries, exhibiting solo projects and curated group presentations. The gallery led fair is a platform for discovery and prides itself on showcasing the best young artists working today.

The 2017 edition sees 8 galleries returning from last year, with 17 that are new to the fair. This reflects the fair's continuing engagement with showing galleries from underrepresented areas of Europe and America along with the more established art centres.

The Editions Section returns this year with artist's editions presented by specially invited organisations including Daata Editions, Kunstraum with &editions, Liverpool Biennial, and Nottingham Contemporary.

Since its inception in 2010, Sunday Art Fair has been held at Ambika P3, 35 Marylebone Road, London. A centrally located 14,000 square foot, triple height subterranean space close to Baker Street underground station and less than ten minutes walk from Regent's Park. Entrance to the fair is free and open to all. Opening times are Friday-Saturday 12-8pm and Sunday 12-6pm.
